

Is Sage Production Management Right For You?

You only make to stock and return items to your inventory when completed. (Even though you might designate the work ticket is being made for another related document.)

You require very little customization with the items you manufacture.

You need to explode subassembly manufacturing into a single work ticket where the parent item is being made.

Additionally If Any the Below Actions or Process are NOT Required:

- The ability to manufacture to the specific sales order and customize the item for the customer and track specific costs to the sale
- Scheduling of shop floor resources based on capacity
- An Advanced Configurator to determine the steps, material, and quantities needed for production
- The ability to track the item produced for future warranty or service work
- The ability to send field techs out to repair an item
- The ability to sell/track service agreements
